WELCOME TO SALMON RIVER COUNTRY

The setting for this part of Idaho is perhaps one of the most scenic and spectacular areas in the Northwest, with acres of vast rolling high-country meadows, rugged mountain peaks, shimmering aspens, and clear running creeks and rivers. Some of the sights of this untamed land are the bighorn sheep, mountain goats, elk, deer, bald eagles, and wild horses. The Salmon River is the main focus in the Salmon Valley; it not only waters the land, but provides an abundance of pleasure for fly fishing, white water rafting, swimming or just floating the river, and watching the wildlife and scenery. Salmon sits in the heart of the Salmon Valley at the junctions of US Highway 93 and Highway 28 at an elevation of 4,000 feet. Challis is situated in Round Valley at the junctions of State Highways 93 and 75 at an elevation of 5,280 feet.

CLIMATE & TYPOGRAPHY

The surrounding mountains of the Salmon Valley rise to over 10,000 feet, thus forming a natural barrier to the elements. Storms may rage around the area, but the worst is kept from breaking through by the protection provided by the mountains, thus giving this valley a mild climate.

Elevation and precipitation are major factors that enable the Salmon Valley to have four distinct seasons with the temperatures ranging from below zero in the winter months to an occasional 95–100 degrees in the heat of the summer. There are on the average, 33 days a year where the temperatures reach ninety degrees or higher and an average of seventeen days a year where the temperatures fall below zero or lower. This allows for an average growing season of 130 days a year.

Salmon Valley is cowboy country. Cattle ranches are being worked much the same way they were a hundred years ago. Over time, more and more people are attracted to this earthy way of life. Numerous outfitters are headquartered here in the form of guest ranches using authentic working cattle ranches as resorts, as this is not only the “Gateway to Idaho’s Wilderness,” but also the “White Water Capital of the World.”

SALMON COMMUNITY PROFILE

THE CITY OF SALMON sits at the forks of the Salmon and Lemhi Rivers in the heart of the Salmon Valley, a land of cattle ranches and timber. This small, isolated but self-contained community of Salmon is the county seat of Lemhi County. The community offers all the services of a larger center, which includes a variety of shopping and medical facilities, educational institutions, preschool to high school, and most types of entertainment and recreational facilities such as theater, a bowling alley, swimming pool, hockey rink, a golf course, library, and a museum along with several great restaurants. Most residents have a love of the outdoors with fishing, hunting, bird watching, rafting, wildlife viewing, and horseback riding, to mention a few, at their back door. Salmon is often known as the white water recreation capital of the world. Local guide services and individual rafters and kayakers will often launch trips here on the famous "River of No Return." This fertile river country has produced many fine horse and cattle ranches. Agriculture, timber, mining, wholesale and retail trade along with miscellaneous services, comprise the local economy. Government plays an important role in the economy.

This untouched "Idaho Treasure" is rich in history, natural resources and folklore. Sacagawea, interpreter for the Lewis and Clark Expedition, a member of the Lemhi Shoshone Tribe, was born near Tendoy, not far from Salmon. Historic relics dot the landscape in the valley with remains of once booming towns, mining camps, and historic trails. Along with the magnificent setting, moderate climate, abundant wildlife, recreation, and a well-developed community, are the friendly country folks who call this valley home. A warm welcome awaits you in this "gem" of a community.

THE IDAHO GEM COMMUNITY PROGRAM

Sponsored by the Idaho Department of Commerce, this program is designed to help communities identify community needs, set goals and objectives, and develop specific plans to achieve these goals. Both Salmon and Challis are members of this program. Past and planned accomplishments are truly community efforts which succeed only because of the support and hard work of citizen organizations and local governments.

POPULATION & ECONOMIC TRENDS

Lemhi County showed a population growth in the past decade; its population has risen to 7,909. In the 1990 census Lemhi County had 6,899. In 1995 the population showed a 16.0% decline from the previous census. Lemhi County increased to 8,004 and peaked in 1997 at 8,064. Since then, the numbers have shown and experienced many swings in its population. These swings were mainly caused by activities in the mining industry. The lumber industry had a major impact during the early years. The county is working overtime in order to stabilize this pattern by diversifying their economy into many different industrial areas. Tourism has played an active part in the economy over the past decade. Once people discover the serenity and solitude of the area, along with the hunting and fishing, the temptation to return will be too great to resist.

THE CIVILIAN LABOR FORCE & UNEMPLOYMENT

The government sector employs almost almost forty percent of workers in Lemhi County. Over ninety percent of the land in the county is owned by the federal government. Over the past ten years, the government sector has increased jobs twenty-one percent. Many people are employed in the agricultural sector, with the cattle industry and crops equally important. Leisure and hospitality employ about fifteen percent. Trade, which includes food stores, eating and drinking establishments, and auto dealerships serve a large geographical area and employ about twenty percent of the labor force.

ECONOMY & INDUSTRY

The major non-agricultural industries are tourism, mining, and logging. Federal and state activities have a major influence upon the local economy. Employment throughout the area is seasonal. The lumber industry is one of the main industries in the area.

Outfitted recreation, as a “stand alone” industry is quite easily qualified by use of USFS reports. However, the industry obviously has additional effects on the economy as clients make local purchases of goods and services in conjunction with their outfitting experience. Approximately eighty percent of outfitted recreation sales in Central Idaho come from whitewater rafting. Hunting and fishing make up the majority of the other twenty percent.

Agriculture, primarily cattle ranching, remains the largest industry for Lemhi County. Ninety-two percent of the land in Lemhi County is federally or state owned. Somewhere in the neighborhood of one-half of the cattlemen have permits to graze their livestock on Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management lands, during the summer months. This means taking the animals to the lower elevations and valleys in the winter season. Most ranches in the county are family owned and operated. A typical ranch runs 150–250 cattle. About ninety-four percent of the agricultural sales can be attributed to the livestock industry. Cattle ranchers rely on public lands for about thirty percent of their grazing and food base. Public ranges in Lemhi County are primarily native grasses and shrubs. Almost no reseeding

SALMON HAS A RICH cultural heritage in mining, logging, and agriculture. The first white men to come to the Lemhi Valley were members of the Lewis and Clark Expedition. On August 12, 1805, Captains Meriwether Lewis and William Clark, a French trapper named Charbonneau, and his Shoshoni wife Sacajawea crossed the Continental Divide. The explorers were seeking a contact with the Shoshoni Indians in order to obtain horses for the mountain crossing. Sacajawea, who had been born into the Shoshoni tribe, recognized the place of her birth and her people. She also recognized her brother, who was now Chief of the Shoshoni people. This coincidence made it possible for the expedition to be supplied with horses for their journey.

At that time, the Indians made no distinction between the two rivers of this valley but called them Ag-gi-pah, which means "fishwater," the water that supplied much of their food. Since the fish were salmon, white men called the river by that name.

The Indians told Lewis and Clark that going down the Salmon was impossible. After exploring it for seventy miles downstream, they realized the Indians were right and abandoned this route and instead chose the Lolo Pass through the Bitterroot Valley.

The first crossing over the Rocky Mountains by wagon was made by Captain B.L.E. Bonneville, who wintered near the mouth of Carmen Creek in 1832. In 1855 a Mormon missionary colony was sent from Salt Lake City and settled on the river that was later named Lemhi River. A fort was built on the large open space that the Indians had always used as pasture for their horses. The mission was abandoned in 1858 because of trouble with the Indians.

A few years later, in 1866, five Montana prospectors discovered rich gold deposits about fourteen miles west of Salmon. This started a gold rush and development of the mining town of Leesburg. This community soon grew to a population of 3,000, and sparked the creation of Salmon City in 1867 and the organization of Lemhi County in 1869. Miners were first ferried across the Salmon River to the gold fields, followed by a toll bridge which served for many years.

The first house in Salmon was the Van Dreff house on the corner east of the museum. The entire block from the museum corner to the river was once Chinatown, occupied by Chinese miners from Leesburg wintering in Salmon.

As soon as Salmon City was laid out in 1867, a log school house was built where Havemann's Warehouse stands. Then came Salmon's first church, followed by several brick buildings which are still standing.

A real work of art is the quaint and beautiful old Episcopal Church built of stone quarried at the old Shoup quarry west of Salmon in 1903. The same stone was used to build the Catholic Church in 1908.

A point of interest is the Statue of Justice which sits atop the courthouse, built in 1911. This statue was put in place with an ordinary derrick before the days of modern equipment.

The Lemhi County Historical Museum was built by the Historical Society, the Salmon Jaycees, and the people and friends of Lemhi County as a memorial to the pioneers and in honor of the Idaho Territorial Centennial. It was dedicated March 4, 1963, 100 years to the day after President Abraham Lincoln signed the bill creating the Territory of Idaho.

CHALLIS COMMUNITY PROFILE

CHALLIS IS NESTLED in the heart of the largest wilderness area in the lower 48 states, the Frank Church Wilderness. This "mile high" small town has a rich history in keeping with its Wild West location.

The first human inhabitants were members of the Shoshone and Nez Perce tribes. The rugged terrain discouraged white men from exploring the area until 1822, when an adventurer named Michael Bourdon led a fur-trapping party into the Round Valley in search of beaver pelts. Other hardy souls followed, settling in the valley to hunt, trap and raise cattle.

In the 1860's, prospectors enticed by tales of gold nuggets lying in river beds began to explore the large tributary of the Salmon River they called the Yankee Fork. Gold was discovered in 1873 and others flooded the area to seek their fortune. The tent cities that popped up along the river became mining towns. The first settlement, called Bonanza, was followed by Custer and Bayhorse.

An entrepreneur by the name of Alvah P. Challis recognized the opportunity presented by development in the valley and along the river and established a supply base to service both the mining towns and the ranches operating on the valley floor in 1876. Originally called "The Station," the town of Challis was named after its founder in 1878.

A toll road, the Custer Motorway, constructed from Challis through the mountains to the mining towns provided a supply route by which the mule trains could reach those remote areas. Challis flourished along with the boomtowns through the 1870's, again in 1895 and lastly, in the early 1900's. By 1910, lower grade ore and rising production costs forces the mines to close, leaving behind a history of boom and bust along the Yankee Fork.

Challis survived the demise of the gold towns and with a population today of about 1,000 is the seat of Custer County. Mining is still part of the local economy but the products are molybdenum and beautiful, multi-colored landscape rock. Ranchers, farmers and a collection of enterprising small business owners contribute to the economic base. The surrounding irrigated lands support cattle, hay, grain and seed potatoes.

The 21st century has brought "new" pioneers to Challis. This crop of explorers has discovered air so clean and clear that NASA is building an observatory just outside of city limits. Recreational opportunities abound given the location of the city on the edge of the Frank Church. These newcomers enjoy all the area has to offer and remain "plugged in" via fiber optics provided by the progressive infrastructure supported by the local telephone cooperative.

Whether you are hiking, fishing, river rafting, playing golf at the high-altitude golf course, visiting those old ghost towns, touring the museum, or just enjoying the spectacular surrounding mountains and rivers, a visit to Challis is enough to convince potential residents that there is still a wealth of riches in the Round Valley!

ECONOMY & INDUSTRY

The largest employment sectors within Custer County are government, agriculture and mining, respectively. Agriculture has the most economic impact on the majority of residents' lives but mining remains the largest source of tax revenue for the county. The area's rich history and natural beauty attract local, regional and international visitors and many locals are employed in businesses directly impacted by this service economy. The agricultural sector is dominated by range livestock operators. Elevation and a short growing season mean that other irrigated lands support hay, seed potatoes and grasses.

The molybdenum mine, one of the area's largest employers, has ramped up production during 2007 and the resulting surge in employment has brought new residents to the county. The Thompson Creek mine, in production since 1983, has recently been purchased by Canadian headquarter Blue Pearl Mining, Ltd.

Attracted by the areas' natural beauty, small-town friendliness, and reasonable real estate prices, people purchasing second homes have begun to have an impact on the population in the valley. The same attractions along with the infrastructure provided by the telephone cooperative have also inspired telecommuters to move to the area.

The county continues to focus on ways to diversify and become less dependent on agriculture and mining while maintaining its coveted rural lifestyle.

GOVERNMENT

Challis has a mayor and four city council members as its city government. It is also the county seat of Custer County. The county offices are located in the court house on Main Street. There are three elected county commissioners, and one city police and sheriff’s department. The city has a master plan and zoning ordinances.

POPULATION

Custer County has a population of 4,166, ranking thirty-ninth in the state. The county showed its biggest peaks and valleys in population between 1993 and 1996. Most of the fluctuation in population is due to the mining industry. The county is in the process of diversifying itself so the mining industry does not have as great of an effect on the economy. They are attempting to attract new and different types of businesses and industry hoping to stabilize the economy.

THE SALMON RIVER

BEWITCHING, ROMANTIC, DYNAMIC, relentless—the Salmon River is the lifeblood of the Salmon Valley. For some 8,500 years man has relied on the mighty Salmon for survival. The Sheepstealer Indians, a small sub-band of the Shoshoni Bannock, have left us many reminders of their early presence in the canyon including pictographs, artifacts and shelters. In 1805 the tranquil waters of the Salmon lured Lewis and Clark as far as Pine Creek where the raging waters, near vertical rock canyon and impassible boulder fields in the river convinced them to seek an alternate route. It was a wise decision as Pine Creek rapid is but a sample of what lies ahead.

To this day no roads traverse the 2.4 million acres of the Frank Church “River of No Return” Wilderness, just one magnificent river that cuts through a canyon deeper than the Grand Canyon and as spectacular in its beauty.

By the turn of the century a few courageous and skilled river pioneers had successfully navigated the Salmon on wooden scows all the way from Salmon City to Lewiston. Having provided transportation for freight and passengers alike, and unable to make a return trip, the scows were themselves dismantled at journey’s end and used to build many of the settlements along the river. Just like some unfortunate river runners, the scows made a one-way journey down the Salmon, never to return.

The “River of No Return” thus earned its name and its reputation. It now draws adventure seekers from all over the world to test its waters. People of all ages and abilities can enjoy the Salmon River in a raft, kayak, canoe, drift boat, jet boat, or on one of the many sandy beaches along its bank

GUIDED TRIPS

- A half-day gentle float trip near Salmon or North Fork will leave you relaxed and inspired with some time left to explore more of the area.
- Fulfilled and rejuvenated after spending a full day on the whitewater stretch of the Salmon, you will reflect on your day traveling beyond Pine Creek, the point where Lewis and Clark turned back.
- If you need to get-away for a few days you can try an overnight (or two) river trips going further into the canyon by day, indulging in the serenity of a starlit sky and a warm campfire (or the comfort of riverside lodging) by night.
- For a real vacation, take a week-long river adventure through the vast wilderness on the “River of No Return,” and return home feeling content and invigorated, planning your return to this special place.
- If you want to see more of the river and its magnificent canyon in less time, try a jet boat trip. You will feel the power of a jet boat match the power of the wild Salmon and enjoy the pleasure of saying you “returned.”

- Although the Salmon has many significant tributaries, none rival the Middle Fork for truly exhilarating rapids, crystal clear water, stunning scenery, excellent trout fishing, pristine wilderness, and worldwide reputation. Most trips last a week in order to do justice to the 125 miles of navigable river but shorter trips are available.

There are many licensed and bonded outfitters to choose from, each with their own unique style in which to guide you safely through the canyon on the waters of the Salmon River. All of them are dedicated to providing you with the best possible experience.

Bewitching, romantic, dynamic, relentless, “The River of No Return” will lure you back.

HISTORIC SETTLEMENTS & ATTRACTIONS

YANKEE FORK HISTORIC AREA

Abandoned communities and treasured stories are scattered throughout the state of Idaho, yet none are more intriguing than those of the Yankee Fork. To commemorate the contribution of frontier mining to Idaho culture and preserve its history, the Yankee Fork Historic Area was established. Within the historic area you will discover the dreams and hear the stories of those resourceful people who grew to love this beautiful country, the land of the Yankee Fork. Prospectors first entered the region in the 1860s when a group of North-erners sought their fortune along a large tributary of the Salmon River which they called the "Yankee Fork." By the 1870s the area regularly received hopeful prospectors and mining camps evolved into mining towns. Roads and processing mills were constructed, families moved in, and the area prospered. Prosperity, however, was fleeting and by 1910 the feverish activity along the Yankee Fork fell silent. Its colorful residents disappeared, leaving behind the dreams they cherished and the country they loved.

To tour this area, begin at the Interpretive Center south of Challis where exhibits, audio-visual programs, mining art, and publications describe the frontier mining history of the region. Then proceed to visit the Sunbeam Dam site, the only dam ever constructed on the Salmon River. The Custer Motorway takes its traveler past numerous historic sites and scenic vistas between Custer and Challis. Up the Yankee Fork Road stand the remains of the once-booming towns of Custer and Bonanza. Interpretive Center 208-879-5244. www.idahoparks.org

GIBBONSVILLE

"The Living Ghost Town," was founded in the 1870s and is located fifteen miles south of Lost Trail Pass on Highway 93. One of the early settlers was a German immigrant, George Kearns who established a local brewery in July, 1897. At its peak, Kearns Brewery supplied thirteen Gibbonsville and surrounding area taverns. Gibbonsville is a paradise for the sportsman and nature lover, with frequent sighting of elk and other big game.

The 100 plus locals look forward to the Old Timers Dinner, an annual event held the second Sunday of August.

SHOUP

Located about forty miles downriver from Salmon—once prosperous and famous for all the mining done in the area—Shoup had a population of over six-hundred. At present not much of the old community can be found, except a few old cabins and the old post office. This post office was established in 1883 and still serves the residents who live up and down Salmon River Road. The settlement also continues to receive its power from the old Pelton wheel. Gas pumps that date back to 1930 still pump gas. One of the mines that operated in the early 1900s can still be seen just below Shoup. Another old mine still seen the way it was is the Gold Hill mine. Lemhi County Historical Society is restoring the old stamp mill.

NORTH FORK

The gateway to the Frank Church "River of No Return" Wilderness Area, North Fork is located just twenty-two miles north of Salmon on Highway 93. North Fork is headquarters to many hunting and fishing guides, as well as white water rafting and float trips down the Salmon.

AREA ATTRACTIONS & RECREATION

LEWIS & CLARK EXPEDITION

In May 1804 Captains Meriwether Lewis and William Clark and their Corps of Discovery departed Illinois on a mission to locate a navigable water route to the Pacific coast. The expedition traveled for fifteen months when they finally reached the headwaters of the Missouri River. They crossed the Continental Divide and traveled through Lemhi County between August 12 and September 3, 1805. This was a difficult journey where they endured many perils making the Corps short of supplies. Guided by Sacajawea they encountered the Lemhi Shoshone [both Shoshone and Shoshoni appear to be accepted spellings] Nation, which gave them much needed supplies and horses. For additional information contact Salmon-Challis National Forest, 208-756-5100 or Bureau of Land Management 208-756-5400.

SACAJAWEA CENTER

Located approximately one mile east of Salmon, the birthplace of Sacajawea, off Highway 28, this 71-acre interpretive cultural and education center takes the visitor through the history and culture of Sacajawea and her people the Agai Dika (Shoshone). Sacajawea was born around 1788, and later became an integral part of the Lewis and Clark Corps of Discovery. At approximately the age of twelve she was captured by the Arika Indians and taken to their Mandan village located in North Dakota. Sacajawea eventually married a French fur trader (Charbonneau) and had a child. In 1805 she and her husband joined the expedition. Sacajawea being the lone female, served as guide and Shoshone translator helping the expedition back to the Salmon River country, to her people and across the continent. As the expedition reached the Salmon River country she was able to guide them over Lemhi Pass and into her homeland where the expedition was given essential supplies, horses, and a guide to lead them across Lolo Pass.

The center offers visitors a chance to “walk into the past” on a one-mile interpretive trail. The visitor center highlights the Native American culture with a mixing of various tribes and the frontier men of the time. Also available is a gift shop, outdoor amphitheater, picnic facilities, research library, fishing access, and a striking bronze, life-size statue commemorating Sacajawea. Open May through October. For more information contact: 208-756-1188 or email: info@sacajaweacenter.org.

FISHING & HUNTING

Fishing is open virtually year-around in Salmon River country. Rainbow, cutthroat, brook, and steelhead trout are the most plentiful species found in nearby lakes and streams. The Salmon River is a popular mecca for Steelhead anglers from September through March. Although the average weight for this sea-run rainbow trout is between four to six pounds, some fifteen to twenty pound trophies have been taken.

The Middle Fork of the Salmon River provides excellent cutthroat trout fishing. However, this paradise can be reached only by boat or from one of several river resorts that are accessible only by chartered flights.

There are seventy-five high elevation lakes which can be reached on foot or horseback. The largest concentration of these is in the Bighorn Crags where brook, rainbow, cutthroat, golden trout, and grayling can be fished from July through September. Nearby Williams Lake provides excellent ice fishing during the winter months. Catches of trophy-size rainbows are not infrequent in this beautiful mountain lake. In the Challis area, Bayhorse Lake is excellent for rainbow trout. Pahsimeroi, Yankee Fork, and the East Fork of the Salmon, including the headwaters, contain such wild species as chinook, brook, bull, cutthroat, rainbow, and white fish. Steelhead can also be found in the Yankee Fork and East Fork. In its 1992 survey, the Idaho Department of Fish and Game counted over 23,000 head of elk within a 100-mile radius of Salmon. Besides having one of the largest elk herds in the West, Salmon River Country has numerable white-tail and mule deer, black bear, bighorn sheep, mountain goat, antelope, cougar, and moose. Hunters wishing to take sheep, goat, cougar, or moose must apply for special permits.

Species of upland birds found here are blue, ruffed, Franklin's, and sage grouse, Chukar and Hungarian partridge, and mourning dove. Pheasant and turkey have been recently planted, but will not be hunted until their populations have stabilized.

The Salmon, Lemhi, and Round Valleys contain excellent habitat for mallard and teal. Canadian geese, in considerable numbers, winter in these valleys. CENTRAL IDAHO'S
WILDERNESS AREAS

Idaho boasts more wilderness area and mountainous acreage than any other state outside Alaska, with over eighty recognized ranges. The Shoshone Indians called these lands Ee Da How "Behold the sun is coming down the mountains," echoing its massive towering peaks and rugged terrain. The state's highest peak, Mount Borah rises 12,662 feet above the steep sweeping plains surrounding it.

In the Sawtooth Wilderness Area, the peaks of the Boulder, White Cloud, and Sawtooth Mountains (called the American Alps) dominate the skies. The five lower lakes of the Sawtooth Wilderness—Alturas, Pettit, Little Redfish, Redfish, and Stanley—offer excellent trout fishing, sailing, and boating. Wildlife, such as elk, bear, mountain goats, deer, and bighorn sheep are abundant in these mountains. Winter recreation, such as snowmobiling and cross-country skiing are superb. Worthy of a visit is the Sawtooth National Fish Hatchery, the highest elevation hatchery in the nation, producing over three million chinook salmon each year. This extraordinary high country, Sawtooth area attracts backpackers, hikers and horseback riders, hungry for a genuine wilderness experience.

To the north, the Salmon River and its forks serve as the only pathways into the Frank Church "River of No Return" Wilderness Area, the second largest single wilderness in the lower forty-eight states. Throughout these rugged mountains and grassy pine meadows thrive deer and elk, black bear, mountain goats, bighorn sheep, along with hundreds of other species. Ancient shelters along the river gorges hold 8,000-year-old cave paintings.

This area is also a geologists paradise. Within this rugged region can be found such minerals as aquamarine, amethyst, topaz and smoky quartz.

WINTER SPORTS

The Salmon and Challis areas, quickly becoming hubs for winter recreation, have acres and acres of public land available for snowmobiling and cross-country skiing. The surrounding mountains average annual snowfall of about 150 to 200 inches, making for lots of opportunities for winter recreation. There are miles and miles of groomed trails, along with access to countless areas of ungroomed trails. The snowmobile registration for Area 30 helps to support the grooming program which is operated on a volunteer basis. For further snowmobiling information contact Salmon Ridgerunners Snowmobile Club at 208-756-2264.

SNOWMOBILING & CROSS COUNTRY SKIING

One-hundred and eight miles of groomed trails await snowmobilers on public lands. Elevations, ranging from 5,000 to 9,000 feet. Trailheads are easily accessible on plowed roads not more than twenty-eight miles from Salmon. Snow conditions are usually suitable for snowmobiling from December to April. The Salmon National Forest and the Bureau of Land Management maintain these trails and can provide maps and additional information related to the conditions and difficulty of the trails.

Cross-country skiing lasts from December until April at elevations ranging from 4,000 to 10,000 feet. Mountain trails offer a variety of challenges in many locations with easy access from Salmon.

Cross Country skiing is popular in the area with many areas to ski in both the Salmon and Challis area. Many ski trails are groomed on a regular basis and there are hundreds of miles of forest trail available to the backcountry skier.

GHOST TOWNS

Lemhi County and Custer County are both inundated with ghost towns. The majority of these ghost towns had their beginnings in mining although a few were stage stops or bases for missionaries. For more information contact the local chambers of commerce, museums, and the Yankee Fork.

CHALLIS RAPID REACTION OBSERVATORY

Challis Rapid Reaction Observatory, located five miles up Main Street, Challis, is a joint project between NASA, Boise State University, and the Custer Economic Development Association. Soon CRRO will install a sixteen-inch telescope and remote mount (built by BSU) to view the sky and specifically supernova explosions. Linked through NASA, these explosions will be visible through the telescope and a computer monitor at the Challis and Salmon schools. For more information contact the Salmon Innovation Center at 208-756-1505.

ALPINE SKI AREAS

LOST TRAIL POWDER MOUNTAIN

The Lost Trail Ski Area is only forty-six miles north of the city of Salmon, on Highway 93, at the Idaho-Montana state line. Elevation at the top of runs is 8,200 feet. Five chair lifts, with a vertical lift of 1,800 feet take skiers to runs presenting challenges from beginners to expert. Two rope tows access more gentle slopes, for ski school classes and the less adventurous.

Ample parking is provided alongside the day lodge, which contains a snack bar, equipment rental, repair facilities, emergency first-aid, Ski Patrol, and the ski school. Overnight accommodations, restaurants, and hot springs are within close proximity to Lost Trail Pass. The average snow fall is 300 inches annually, with 85-90% sunny days. Conditions are generally good to excellent with frequent falls of fresh powder overnight, which provides outstanding conditions for all levels of skiers. For the downhill skier who wants to ski a variety of terrain and not spend most of their day waiting on a lift, Lost Trail Powder Mountain at Lost Trail Pass is a ski area that should not be overlooked.

Another Alpine Ski Area, within a few hours of Salmon and Challis is Sun Valley, Idaho. Sun Valley Company, Sun Valley, ID 83353, 800-635-8261. Vertical Drop: 3,400 Feet. Lifts: 7 quads, 5 double chairs, 7 triple chairs. Runs: 78
